As you leave the affectionate ranks of your school, I give you in farewell the advice of Dag Hammarskjöld, who led the examined life we hope for you: "Only he who keeps his eye on the far horizon will find his right road."

Richard Loveland

The Senior Class dedicates this 1984-1985 yearbook to the loving and colorful memory of Cesar Albini.

Quickly, as if she were recalled by something over there, she turned to her canvas. There it was — her picture. Yes, with all its greens and blues, its lines running up and across, its attempt at something. It would be hung in the attics, she thought; it would be destroyed. But what did that matter? she asked herself, taking up her brush again. She looked at the steps; they were empty; she looked at her canvas; it was blurred. With a sudden intensity, as if she saw it clear for a second, she drew a line there, in the centre. It was done; it was finished. Yes, she thought, laying down her brush in extreme fatigue, I have had my vision.
